LOOSE IS SACRIFICED.

Those of you that can manage to squeeze out a few tears, prepare to let them trickle now over the elimination of "Ed" Loose from the Republican gubernatorial fight.

We can imagine Hamlet Spry holding the political skull of Loose in his hand and remarking to Horatio Callister:

"Alas, poor Ed! I knew him, Horatio, a fellow of infinite loyalty to Smoot, of most excellent willingness to give up campaign funds; he hath borne the financial burden of the party a thousand times; and now, how abhorred in my imagination is his political ambition. It makes me sick. Here hung the purse that I have touched. I know not how oft. Where be your contributions now?—your wide-open barrel?—your party devotion?—your comings through that were wont to set the campaign committee on a roar?"

Poor Loose! He has always been regarded enough to furnish campaign sinews. Time and time again he has gladdened the hearts of his fellow Republicans by handing them checks for real amounts of money. And time and again, overflowing with gratitude for his sorely needed help, Loose had been told by party workers that whenever he wanted anything politically, regardless of its size, it would be his for the asking. Now he has asked for bread and he has been handed a large can with the "23" sign conspicuously attached thereto.

It would be interesting to get an honest statement from Loose as to his feelings. We have no idea that we could disburse that statement among our readers, because it would hardly be fit for publication, but it would be interesting, nevertheless. He will not be nominated for governor by his party, although he wanted the honor to hand down to his children and his children's children through many coming generations of the Loose family.

Perhaps he has been promised that if he will step aside in favor of Spry he will be elected senator to succeed Mr. Sutherland two years hence. But if Ed Loose takes any stock now or at any future time in promises made by his Republican co-laborers he is a fit subject for detention in the most prominent institution in that dear old Provo. He has already been bunched once. Whether or not he will be bunched again should not be an open question.

EDUCATION IN COOKING.

An educator of this city, one who has had a good deal of experience, too, ventured to remark the other day that "any girl can learn to cook in three weeks." Follows a chorus of dissent from prominent women who unite in the declaration that domestic science is one of the most important studies, and suggest that the aforesaid educator knows more about a good many things than he does about cooking.

Although any mere man may well hesitate to enter into the discussion, it may not be amiss to venture a few footnotes in the interest of knowledge. In the first place, there ought to be a definition of what is meant by cooking. Some of us have learned to cook in less than three days under the compulsion of necessity; but the achievement bore no possible relation to domestic science. It requires no artist to produce ham and eggs, eatable ham-and, too, flapjacks are within the range of mediocre ability, and an appetizing gravy can be concocted in camp by a sheepherder from flour and bacon grease.

But—and this is important—a continuous round of ham and eggs with occasional flapjacks and bacon gravy contributes little to the greatness of the nation or the happiness of man. The discriminating male of experience would hesitate to enlist for life as the consumer of cooking at the hands of a girl who had learned her art in three weeks, and who refused to learn anything further. But an intimate acquaintance with another type of cook, namely, one who began in ignorance but has spent years of study in the business, justifies the belief that domestic science is about the most important and satisfactory contribution to the modern curriculum of schools.

An amateur can get up a fairly good meal with plenty of good material; it takes a genius to prepare dinner for half a dozen unexpected guests from the relics of the last meal and such canned goods as happen to be available. Moreover, the graduate of the domestic science course knows how to economize not only in material but in effort; she is taught the value of different foods—which has been an unknown quantity in American kitchens heretofore, and, best of all, she has learned to dignify her calling.

Kind Providence only knows how many families have had their home life wrecked by the girl who learned to cook in three weeks. Indigestion, ruined dispositions, the temptation to stay down town for meals, to say nothing of the unkind remarks that follow deadly cooking—all these evils can be removed by a first-class course in domestic science.

Of course, there is always one proviso in any educational scheme: the subject has to be of the right sort. Some women would never learn to cook if they took fourteen years of preparation and another four years of post-graduate work.

THE FATE OF GUFFEY.

Out west here, where the Standard Oil and all its workings find mighty little favor, the fate that met one Colonel James Guffey of Pennsylvania is viewed with considerable satisfaction. Guffey had thimble-rigged the Pennsylvania delegation so as to control it in spite of the primary laws and all the common rules of fair politics, and he had been accustomed to running things his own way at home so long he thought a national convention would be easy.

Before the convention met, Mr. Bryan had told the anti-Guffey delegates what he thought of the oily colonel, remarking among other things that Guffey was a bushwhacker, Guffey retorted in violent language, denouncing Bryan. Most naturally, Mr. Bryan objected to having Guffey on the national committee, where he would be in position to betray the party and its candidate, and the issue was made in the convention before the committee on credentials. Although some of the strongest eastern delegations stood by the Pennsylvanian, he lost his contest, and the rollers were put under him and his bogus delegates with the utmost celerity. The result is to throw Guffey out of the national committee, give his opponents control of the Pennsylvania delegation, and qualify him for the junk pile as a political wreck.

As a matter of fact, Guffey and his kind belong in the Republican party. Politics with them is not a matter of principle at all; Democracy and Republicanism are exchangeable terms representing opportunity for barter and profit. If they found it to their advantage to betray Bryan in the coming campaign it wouldn't take three minutes to make the deal. The sifting process which has eliminated their class from Democratic councils has gradually sent most of them to the aid of the opposition, where they belong; and Guffey's departure about finishes the job. If he had any notion of the proprieties he would have stepped out of his own accord; but, lacking any such notion, he has gotten exactly what was coming to him.

SAILING OF THE FLEET.

Without demonstration of any kind, save the cheering of thousands of spectators who lined the shores of San Francisco bay, the Atlantic fleet has started on its journey home. It is sailing directly away from home, and will be for many weeks, but it is, nevertheless, en route for Norfolk and Hampton Roads by the longest possible route. Announcement is made that the first stop will be at Honolulu, where a great reception has been planned in honor of the officers and men.

From Honolulu the great array of fighting ships will go on to Auckland, Sydney and Melbourne, where the subjects of Great Britain will be shown that Britannia does not necessarily rule the wave. Japan is next on the list, and then, about the first of October, another home port, the port of Manila, will be reached. Some seven weeks will be spent in Philippine waters, with target practice and other demonstrations to occupy the minds of the seafighters and their entertainers.

Then the noses of the battleships will be headed toward Aden, Arabia, and after that, by easy stages, through the Suez canal into the Mediterranean. Off Gibraltar it is proposed to combine our fleet with a great British fleet and afford the people fortunate enough to be in that vicinity the grandest naval spectacle the world has ever known. And at last the ships will sail due west until they reach their own land once more.

It is a great program, one that will, if successfully carried out, reflect great credit on Admiral Sperry and the men under his command. The cruise will have been a greater one than was ever attempted by a great fleet, and it cannot fail to have a most beneficial effect, not only in increasing the efficiency of our navy, but in demonstrating to the nations of the earth that the United States is indeed a world power, ready to defend its title against any that may question it.

THE SIMPLE LIFE.

(Judge.)

Nora—Plase, ma'am, O! wish to have Mrs. Closefisted—But why, Nora? Have we not always treated you like one of the family?
Nora—Thot yez hov, ma'am, an' it's more than I can stand an' stand any longer.

SOCIETY

The home of Governor and Mrs. John C. Cutler last evening presented an animated scene, when they entertained some 400 of their friends at a lawn party. The house and the grounds were brilliantly lighted, the entire place being hung with strings of colored lights and gay with flags and bunting. From the gate to the house festoons of lights made the place bright as day, and huge flags were hung on all sides. On a side veranda an orchestra was stationed, and during the evening at intervals this furnished music for the dancers, a broad dancing floor having been erected on the north side of the house. Between times vocal music was enjoyed, the singers being Miss Edna Evans, Fred C. Graham and a mixed quartette. The governor and Mrs. Cutler were assisted by the members of their family, Mr. and Mrs. John C. Cutler, Jr., Mrs. Jenkins and their two younger daughters. The younger people enjoyed the dancing till a late hour, and the many cosy corners on the broad lawn made delightful spots for friendly greetings.

Mrs. W. D. Donohoe was the hostess yesterday at a large and elaborate bridge tea given in honor of Mrs. James Finlen of Chicago and Miss Hester Gavelle of Spokane. Eleven tables of bridge were played and several more friends were in later for tea. The rooms were all decorated with roses except the dining room, where sweet peas were used. The hostess was assisted at tea by Mrs. W. W. Armstrong, Mrs. W. Edward Fife, Mrs. George A. L. Sullivan and Miss Lorene Leary.

Mrs. John Ward entertained the Regimental Bridge club at the post on Tuesday last at the last meeting for the summer. The afternoon was made delightful in every way, the affair being more elaborate than the previous ones. Prizes were won by Mrs. Potter and Mrs. Hugh Walthall. The bachelors were asked in later to tea, when the hostess was assisted by some of the younger ladies in serving.

The last hop till the early autumn-time will be given tonight at Fort Douglas. Although no formal invitations have been sent out, the affair will be a more elaborate one than ordinary, and a supper will be served in buffet style as at the larger affairs. Colonel and Mrs. Scott, assisted by the senior officers, will receive the guests.

Miss Joy Whitehead entertained at a luncheon on Tuesday for Miss Grace Trast, Miss Lena Brown and Mrs. C. A. Palmquist. The luncheon was followed by an informal musicale. The rooms were decorated with roses, pink and white in the parlors and red in the halls, while the dining table was bright with sweet peas.

Mrs. E. Bonnemort will entertain at a large charity card party this afternoon for the benefit of the Orphans home on State street. Mrs. Bonnemort has given her home for the affair and she will be assisted by a number of her friends who are members of the board. The affair is the largest planned for the afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. William P. Kiser will entertain a number of friends at a dance on Monday night next at the new Emigration inn in Emigration canyon for their sister, Miss Kiser. The guests will make the trip up by the new electric line or in motor cars, a good road being already established.

A party of friends will leave town tomorrow morning for a trip on the lake lasting until Sunday night. Among them are Mr. and Mrs. Wragg, Mr. and Mrs. Engstrom, Miss Martha Johnson and her guest, Miss Jessie Bancroft, and Dr. W. G. Anderson.

Miss Cassandra Wood entertained a party of eight girls at the Orpheum Wednesday afternoon, following the play with a supper. The guests were the Misses Hope Kervin, Katherine Collins, Katherine Jacobson, Phyllis Sharp, Marion Hall, Etha, Mayo and Florence Halloran.

Mr. and Mrs. J. H. McChrystal and their daughter Frances and their young son have returned from the coast and are at home for the present at the Colonial. They will shortly be at 130 S street for the summer, having taken Mrs. Vorbyck's house.

Mrs. H. W. Walker and her son and daughter are at the Brookbank home for the summer, and will spend the next two months in the country.

Mrs. H. C. Bellinger leaves shortly to spend the summer in the northwest.

Mrs. Paul C. Potter leaves early next week for San Francisco to visit relatives.

Mrs. M. H. Coffin, formerly of this city, is here from Boise visiting Judge and Mrs. Colborn.

NERVOUS HEADACHES

Frequently Caused by Mental Overwork.

Can Be Cured Only by Toning up the Nervous System, the Treatment Which Restored This Young Ithaca Woman to Health.

One who has not endured the suffering caused by nervous headache cannot realize the awful agony of its victims.

Worst of all, the ordinary treatment cannot be relied upon to cure nor even to give relief that is permanent. Some doctors will say that if a person is subject to these headaches there is nothing that will prevent their recurrence.

Nervous headaches, as well as neuralgia, are caused by lack of nutrition—the nerves are starved. Feed the nerves by furnishing through the blood the elements which they require and the cause of these nervous troubles is removed. The only way to feed the nerves is through the blood and it is in this way that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have accomplished so many remarkable cures.

Miss F. Mae Markell, of 108 Huestis street, Ithaca, N. Y., says: "I had nervous headaches for several years. They began when I was a student in the high school. I was studying hard, grew pale and thin and my friends were afraid I was going into a decline. I had no appetite, my digestion was poor and I lost in weight. The headaches came on two or three times a week and sometimes every day. They were so severe that quite often I would have to go to bed when I came home from school. My blood was in such a bad condition that my hands were covered with a rash."

"Our family doctor benefited me for a time, but did not seem able to cure me. My grandfather told me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, saying they had helped him. I found that they were helping me and took them until cured. When school opened again I was strong and able to study and have never had the headaches since."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all druggists, or will be sent, postpaid, on receipt of price, 50 cents per box; six boxes for $2.50, by Dr. Williams Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y. They are guaranteed to be free from opiates or any harmful drug and cannot injure the most delicate system.

stone, which occurred last evening at the home of the bride's parents, was a quiet affair, none but the bride's family and a few intimate friends being present. The Rev. E. C. Parker officiated. The bride was prettily and tastefully dressed in a white lingerie gown, trimmed with real lace, and carried bride's roses. Miss Ella Rogers, also dressed in white and carrying pink roses, was the bridesmaid. Irving L. Wilkins, brother of the bride, attended the groom. After partaking of the wedding supper the happy couple left at once for a month's tour of the Yellowstone and California resorts, after which they will make their home at Lindstrom, Minn.
